THE DEAN

It has not been an easy year at the law school. When I was in practice, I got a wonderful letter from a lawyer who was on the other side of a transaction. We were engaged in a difficult merger, and although we were great friends and although he was a great lawyer and one of those people with whom one loves to work, things were not going well. We had difficult clients, and it was a difficult deal to put together.

My friend wrote:

"Dear Biff: This letter starts pleasantly and ends pleasantly. It is only the middle that you will not like."

Dean Campbell

This quote describes our year. It started pleasantly, and I believe it is ending pleasantly. The middle of the year, however, was just awful.

The 1991-92 academic year surely started on a positive note. We had a record number of applications for admission and had enrolled the best first year class ever (our median LSAT score jumped almost 2 points). We had successfully recruited two new and capable young professors.

We were coming off a record year in our fund raising. We were completing work on our Law School Enhancement Plan, a most ambitious plan inspired and refined by our Visiting Committee and a plan that establishes the framework for major progress by the law school. I could go on, but the point is made, I believe, that we were moving strongly in the right direction.

We knew, however, that the year would be strenuous for us, because, for example, we were due for our sabbatical ABA accreditation inspection. What we did not anticipate, of course, was the 10% reduction in the University's state funding. When the dust settled from the budget cut, the law school lost 8% of its operating budget.

I do not intend to minimize the harmful effect of this cut in our operating budget. It hurt us and the quality of what we are able to do. We lost funding in many important areas, including significant losses in library and scholarship support.

The problem is exacerbated, frankly, by our own efficiency. If an institution is efficient and generating real benefit from its marginal dollar, cuts hurt even more.

What we suffered, however, is no different from what most other institutions of higher education, both public and private, are suffering.

Notwithstanding our temporary setbacks, I believe the law school will continue its steady progress. Already we see signs that we are moving ahead.

Again, our applications for admission for 1992 are at a record level (they are up approximately 17% from last year, which itself was a record).

Our private support for 1991 was outstanding, and I think this year may be even better. During 1991, we completed our Ashland Challenge by raising a total of over $500,000. We established and funded the Edward T. Breathitt Professorship of Law. During this calendar year, Colvin Rouse ('28) of Versailles established one of our largest ever scholarship endowments.

I hope this does not make me appear overly Panglossian, but I am convinced that our sound fundamentals, energy and aggressive pursuit of sensible goals are bases for continued progress.

I cannot close without acknowledging the retirement of Martha Grange from the law school. Martha left us at the end of June.

Martha first came to the law school in 1967. She saw thousands of students, scores of faculty and staff and five deans. She was an important part of the place. I personally enjoyed my association with Martha tremendously. She tolerated me as a student, faculty member and dean. We all wish her the very best and will miss her.

Bert Combs in his law offices in 1988.

In Memoriam

By EDWARD T. BREATHITT

When you reflect on Bert Thomas Combs as a lawyer, you have first to think of Bert as a student. Certainly his mother, a mountain schoolteacher, had a profound influence in his life.

She instilled in Bert the value of an education and the importance of never stopping the learning process.

Bert worked his way through Cumberland College and the University of Kentucky College of Law. His uncle, Dean "T-Square" Jones, was

Dean of Men at the University when I was a student and certainly was a role model for Bert.

The lawyers in his home town of Manchester provided the opportunity for him to be a law clerk. His professors in the law school recognized in Bert a student with rare intellect and understanding of the law. He was Order of the Coif and Managing Editor of the Kentucky Law Journal. His classmates had great respect for Bert and they supported him throughout his political career. I was privileged to be his friend.

On many hunting and fishing trips, I would find Bert reading one of the classics, or a book about a famous leader or a distinguished lawyer.

Bert was a lawyer's lawyer. When he moved to Prestonsburg to practice law, his friend Woodrow Burchett said, "He talked like us, he walked like us, he thought like us, and we liked him."

He soon established a reputation as a man to be valued if he was on your side in a lawsuit and one to be respected and feared if he was your opponent. In his quiet way he would analyze the problem, do his research, set a strategy, and represent his client in a very effective way. He realized the value of thorough preparation and never went to court unprepared.

Bert was elected Commonwealth's Attorney and honed his skills as a prosecutor. This served him well when General Douglas MacArthur selected him to help prosecute Japanese war criminals at the end of World War II.

Bert was a judge's judge. Bert was drafted to run for Kentucky's highest court. That was a very difficult race because his opponent was a distinguished former Republican governor and member of the court, the Honorable Simeon S. Willis. Fortunately, Bert ran in a strongly Democratic district and was elected.

That's when I first knew him, for I served on the Judicial Council of Kentucky, which he chaired. The judges and other members of the council immediately recognized that Bert was not an ordinary man.

His opinions on the court and his leadership in his profession soon marked him for greatness.

Following his outstanding term as Governor, President Johnson appointed him to the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

There he earned the respect of his fellow judges and the lawyers who practiced in his court. He found, however, that he missed being in the pit as a contestant and soon had the opportunity to be a lawyer/politician when he was asked to be a partner in the firm of Bullitt, Combs and Tarrant, which later merged with Wilson Wyatt's firm to form Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs. Bert quipped, "When we merged in the governor's race we agreed my name came first. When we merged law firms I thought it was only fair for Wilson's name to be first."

Bert Combs was a public servant that cared.

The unemployed coal miner, standing in a food stamp or commodities line with the cold winter wind whistling up his britches leg, knew that he had a friend in the Governor's office that cared.

The widow of a coal miner, with a house full of children to raise and educate, knew that she had a Governor that cared.

The child, whether born with black, brown, yellow, or white skin, knew that he had a Governor and a man that cared and would devote his life to ensuring equal opportunity.

I won't attempt to outline the great accomplishments of Bert as a governor. As a lawyer, in the last years of his life, Bert won the greatest case of his career, pro bono, when he successfully represented sixty-six school districts before the Kentucky Supreme Court, ultimately resulting in the Kentucky Education Reform Act.

His dear friend and journalist, John Ed Pearce, summed it up in his tribute at Bert's eightieth birthday celebration:

Combs has cause to be content. They say that the loveliest light of day illuminates the evening sky, and if Combs decides to relax in the afternoon light, he has earned the chance. In a day when men prate of being education president or education governor but do nothing to justify the claim, Bert Combs can take comfort in the knowledge that, without foolish boast or self-serving words, he was the savior of Kentucky education.

I don't know how he feels about being called Kentucky's greatest governor. I don't know how he would feel about being Kentucky's first citizen. But that's what he is.

Bert left his mark on Kentucky and we are a better Commonwealth and a better people because of his service. All of us will miss him. He deserves his rest and his honored place in history.

Goodnight, sweet prince....

Judge Joe Lee receives Harrison Tweed award

Earlier this year the Honorable Joe Lee, Chief Judge of the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Eastern District of Kentucky, received the Harrison Tweed Award for Special Merit in Continuing Legal Education. The award was presented by the American Law Institute - American Bar Association (ALI-ABA) at their annual awards luncheon on August 9, 1992, in San Francisco, an event held in conjunction with the American Bar Association's 1992 Annual Meeting.

Judge Lee was the planning chair for the very first program presented by the UK Office of Continuing Legal Education in October 1973. Since that time he has served as planning chair for each of the bankruptcy programs UK/CLE has conducted over its 20-year existence. Judge Lee, a 1955 UK law graduate, has been extremely active in CLE for more than 30 years and is considered by many to be the "founding father" of continuing legal education in the state of Kentucky. His work also is well recognized beyond Kentucky, Judge Lee having been involved with programs in 15 other states.

In addition to CLE program creation and administration, Judge Lee has made numerous written contributions to the area of bankruptcy practice, including sole authorship of the Bankruptcy Practice Manual published by Lawyers Cooperative Publishing Company, and service as Editor-In-Chief of The American Bankruptcy Law Journal. His loyalty and dedication have resulted in countless benefits to the Kentucky bar and to UK/CLE.

Support for high-quality continuing legal education growing in Kentucky

At the January 1992 meeting of the Association of American Law Schools' Section On Continuing Legal Education, Austin Anderson, longtime Director of the Michigan program, set out "Seven Rules to Guide CLE Directors." The first rule was "To Remember that Loyalty Is Dead." We hope not. While this seems to be conventional wisdom in many parts of the country, the University of Kentucky College of Law is pleased for the opportunity to express its deep appreciation for the loyalty our many speakers, authors, planning committee members, registrants, and publication patrons have shown to our CLE program.

As a separately budgeted, non-profit arm of the law school, our office is established to be self-supporting. "Self-supporting" may be misleading. We are supported by the loyal volunteers who lend their expertise to our efforts, and by the persons who provide our funding through seminar tuitions and publication purchases. We work throughout the year to provide the highest quality CLE services financially possible. For UK/CLE, loyalty is not dead. It is the fact which keeps us alive. Thanks again to all who continue to make our existence possible!

Celebrating 20 years of service

By Todd Eberle

The College of Law's Office of Continuing Legal Education (UK/CLE) is preparing to celebrate 20 years of service to the legal profession. The office continues to enhance its state, regional and national reputation as a provider of high quality conferences and publications. The small, but efficient staff worked particularly hard during the 1991-92 year to keep the office at the forefront of CLE circles in Kentucky and beyond.

Assistant Director David Miller worked with Editorial Assistant/Marketing Director Charlene Montgomery to develop and publish four new practice handbooks, five supplements to existing handbooks and three new monographs. Miller also addressed the 1991 ACLEA Annual Meeting in Atlanta on "Starting a Publishing Program." Director Todd Eberle has been nominated President-Elect of the Association of Continuing Legal Education Administrators (ACLEA) and serves as editor of that organization's Handbook For Continuing Legal Education. Business Manager Susan Saunier supervised the finances of the organization ably through a period when CLE providers across the country were reporting significant financial losses. The work of each staff member is substantial. However, with constant reassessment of calendars, marketing efforts and product quality, their efforts have allowed the office to maintain a position among the top law school based CLE programs in the country.

Conferences

Recent programming efforts have confirmed the popularity of many annual and biennial conferences.

UK/CLE's newly supplemented three-volume civil practice set.

The December 1991 Midwest/Midsouth Bankruptcy Institute featured an outstanding national faculty and drew registrants from seven states. Another two-day program, Real Estate Into The 1990's, focused on current problems in real estate and received high praise. The February 1992 Midwest/Midsouth Securities Law Conference in Louisville enjoyed registrations from a five-state region and featured SEC Commissioner Richard Roberts among an impressive group of speakers. The 12th Annual Legal Issues for Financial Institutions Conference in March and the 19th Annual Estate Planning Institute in July attracted their traditionally enthusiastic audiences. The Kentucky Derby weekend Annual Equine Law Conference, now in its 7th year, once again drew a nationwide audience. Over the course of its history, registrants have attended from over 40 different states and several foreign countries. On May 22, 1992, UK/CLE presented a program on the Civil Rights Act of 1991 and the Americans With Disabilities Act. It stood as Kentucky's first live statewide CLE utilizing "compressed" video. That system allows for two-way sound and visual hookup from the live location site to four other locations across the state. The office plans to utilize the system again for upcoming programs.

Publications

The June 1992 publication of Employment Law brought the total number of practice handbook titles in the UK/CLE library to 15 and brought the total number of pages to over 10,000 for the collective library. The 1991-92 year produced four new handbooks, five supplements to existing handbooks and three new titles in the popular monograph series. The upcoming year will see publication of a new title on Kentucky Election Law financed in part by the Kentucky Bar Foundation, and a joint project between UK/CLE and the Kentucky Bar Association to publish a volume collecting all Kentucky legal ethics opinions. Efforts begun over the past two years to update UK/CLE's law practice library through supplements and new editions will continue into 1993. This past year the office completed supplements to all three volumes in the civil practice series, Civil Practice Before, At, and After Trial.

Poland on 1,000,000 zlotys a day

My journal of the ABA Eastern Europe initiative

By Professor Sarah N. Welling

In May I went to Poland for eight days as part of the American Bar Association's Central and East European Law Initiative (CEELI). When Dean Bakert heard about the trip, she asked me to keep a diary and bring back some pictures. The following is what I brought her.

The CEELI program was established to encourage contact between American lawyers and lawyers from the emerging democracies. The ABA hopes that American lawyers will be able to help these countries jump start legal systems suited to their new structures. Specifically, the purpose of the Poland trip was to help that country write a white collar criminal code. The group from the U.S. included Scott Michel, a partner at Caplin & Drysdale specializing in tax fraud, John Byrne, a senior legislative counsel to the American Bankers Association specializing in bank fraud, and me, specializing in money laundering. The Polish Bar Association was having its annual conference at a resort in Kiekrz, a suburb of Poznan, and we were to attend the two-day conference and do presentations on the American approach to white collar crime.

May 18-19

The three of us leave Dulles on Monday evening, May 18. Seven hours later we land in Frankfurt, Germany, and wait to catch a Luftansa flight to Warsaw. As we sit in the waiting area, a young, trendy-looking German woman rattles quickly in German to her companion. In the middle of the German, she says, "No way, Jose!" and "nerd alert." We conclude that some things are universal.

We arrive in Warsaw at noon. For us, this is 6 a.m., so we're a little flat. Bozena Sarnecka-Crouch, the ABA CEELI liaison in Poland, meets us. She is from Poland but has been to law school at both Duke and Tulane and has worked for years as a Polish specialist at the Library of Congress. We check into the Forum Hotel and go to bed. Meeting later in the evening, we walk around, eyeing Warsaw. We have a dinner of duck and borscht and see an unclassical ballet. Afterwards, back at the hotel, I do a half-hour working with hair dryer converters and adaptors.

May 20

I have a room service breakfast and watch "Guten Morgen Deutschland." I do not speak German, but morning talk-show prattle is universal. We catch a train at 10:30 a.m. for Poznan, a city to the west. We are unlike most people on the train because we have bought seats as well as transit tickets. Others have bought a cheaper ticket entitling them to stand for the three-hour ride. In Poznan, we're met by Professor Ratajczak and Piotr Gosieniecki. They are law professors at the University of Adam Mickiewicza in Poznan. The university, named for a famous poet, is known as UAM. Piotr is in charge of us. Professor Ratajczak is president of the Polish Bar Association, so he is running the conference. We check into the Hotel Merkur. Later that afternoon we meet with Professor Ratajczak, Piotr, Professor Golecki and several others to plan the program. The Poles all smoke; the Americans don't. We begin to see what a barrier language is. We speak no Polish. Only one of the Polish participants speaks any English. Their second language is Russian, or sometimes German. This is because when the Soviet Union was in charge of Poland, there were few English classes and mandatory Russian classes.

After the planning meeting, we adjourn to dinner at a resort on a nearby lake. I sit by a fellow named Alexander who says he once lived for several weeks in the Trump Tower in New York City. I think this is what Alexander said, but language is a problem.

May 21

The three of us meet ABA liaison Bozena downstairs for breakfast. The dean's secretary at UAM is detailed to give us a walking tour of Poznan. We walk briskly around Poznan for two hours, seeing monuments and churches. The local theater is playing "JFK."

At 1 p.m. we go to a roundtable coffee where we are introduced to approximately 25 people. When we ask Piotr if he is going, he says no, the meeting is only for the nomenklatura, roughly translatable as important people. This is heady news.

At 2:30 p.m., Professor Ratajczak opens the conference in a plenary session. We slip out after several presentations as the talks are in Polish and our translators will not arrive until tomorrow.

Dinner is served at 4:45 p.m. No alcohol is served. We conclude that if the Polish Bar Association aspires to emulate the ABA (as the Poles say they do), they will need tutoring in conference essentials. At dinner I am approached by Piotr Andrezejewski, the business editor of Wprost, a weekly news magazine similar to Newsweek. The editor has heard of our visit and wants to interview me about money laundering. We set a time for the next day.

Piotr drives us out to the resort and conference center in Kiekrz, 30 minutes outside Poznan, where the rest of the conference will be held. The name of the conference center is "Osrodek Komendy Wojewodzkiej Policji." It is one of the nicest facilities in Poland. In the old days, it was used as a state training center for police. Now, it is struggling to stay afloat, and is happy to be rented for two days by the bar association.

The buses of conference participants arrive at the center at the same time we do, so a huge line forms to check in. Professor Ratajczak comes out with our keys and whisks us through the lobby to our rooms. This strikes us as conclusive evidence that we are indeed nomenklatura.

That evening we Americans have a brief meeting to plan our presentations. We have been joined by Michael Diedring, the Deputy Director of CEELI. He is on his way through to Vilnius, Lithuania to work on a conference on constitutionalism. When we corner him, he immediately concedes he has a neat job.

As we discuss our plans, a TV drones in the background. The television in English is CNN, MTV and reruns of "Bewitched." What can these people think of us?

Bozena tells us that the opening night of the conference will be celebrated with a bonfire and sausage roast. We walk to a campground where a bonfire is burning. Beer is served and large sausages are skewered on shaved tree branches for us. We drink beer and roast sausages and try to project American friendship. As the sky darkens, an accordion appears and people join hands and dance around the bonfire. We note that this is unlike most conferences in the U.S. Scott gets engaged in a conversation with a retired Supreme Court Justice from Lodz. When Scott asks if we can get another sausage, the justice replies, "It's a free country!" and laughs.

May 22

At 9:30 a.m. the conference starts, but there is no coffee served until a mid-morning break. More work on conference fundamentals is indicated.

Our translators arrive. They are both college students. They sit facing us at the conference tables. One translates the Polish into English while the other one translates our English into Polish. Then they switch jobs. The translation is good but tedious, one sentence at a time.

Scott and John and I make our presentations. One topic we cover is how U.S. law enforcement investigates fraud and bribery. Scott and I describe a pyramid method, getting some kind of leverage over people in the lower levels and turning them to testify against those higher up in the pyramid. When the Poles ask questions about this approach, the translators describe it as encouraging people to denounce each other to the government. This is a novel and chilling way to characterize it.

Poland

The conference continues throughout the day. The Poles make presentations on a proposed statute protecting economic relations. I discuss the American reliance on the mail fraud statute. John discusses the role of financial institutions in combatting fraud. Scott discusses tax fraud.

Bozena tells us that there will be a banquet and ball that night to celebrate the conference. It is only the second time the Polish Bar Association has had an annual meeting. Under the old system, the lawyers did meet, but the meetings were lifeless, government-orchestrated affairs that were not taken seriously.

At 8:15 p.m. dinner is served. It is elegant, including beef tartare and caviar. Several bottles of vodka are opened and set on the table with what are basically shot glasses. We begin to think that maybe American conference planners should take a page from the Poles' book. On the second floor of the center, a rock band begins to play. The Poles all dance. I dance with Professor Ratajczak to the Polish version of "A Whiter Shade of Pale." After dinner there is a lottery. At our table, we have been joined by Sylwia Zapalska, a judge of the Administrative Supreme Court, and her husband, a vascular surgeon. He buys us many lottery tickets. I win a doll, sunglasses and a fan.

The band plays until 3:30 a.m. Most of the Poles are still dancing at that time. Like the batteries, we, too are still going, projecting American friendship. Because Poland is so far North, the sky is getting light when we go to bed.

May 23

At breakfast again there is no coffee. After last night, this takes on the dimensions of catastrophe. We plead with our translators to find some. When they appear some time later triumphantly carrying coffee, one of them explains that they are good [...]. I miss the word, but they explain that it surfaced originally in Germany after World War II and means procurers or facilitators, people who can put their hands on a scarce and critical item in a chaotic society. The word suggests someone with creativity and initiative. The trail of this word, from post-war Germany to post-Soviet Union Poland, is interesting.

At 9:30 the conference starts. Privatization crime is discussed. I leave for my interview with Wprost. The main question Wprost wants to ask is, why should Poland try to stop large amounts of money from passing through their country for laundering? This is one of those questions students come up with that catches you relying on unidentified assumptions. We talk some more. Finally I ask, if Poland just escaped domination by one group, would they want to give a lot of potentially dominant power to another (arguably less savory) group?

The conference moves on to a lunch for the nomenklatura. Mike Diedring thanks the Poles on behalf of the ABA for inviting us to participate. After the lunch, I present UK T-shirts to Professor Ratajczak and Piotr.

Piotr drives us to Poznan, to the home of the Vice Dean of the law school at UAM. She serves ice cream and coffee and recounts her visit to the law schools at the University of Iowa and the University of Akron earlier this year. Later, we catch the train back to Warsaw.

May 24

We have the day off. John and Mike are flying out, but Scott and I are staying to speak Monday to the University of Warsaw Criminal Law Society. We walk around and see Russian street vendors selling Russian military uniforms. One of the young Russian street vendors wears an Alma College T-shirt. I buy a Soviet military hat. It is used, and the fellow's name is still written in Cyrillic inside it. With the Russians selling their army uniforms to Americans on the street to raise cash, we conclude that the cold war is over and we won. I buy the presents I've promised to bring home. There are 13,750 zlotys to $1, so every price must be divided by 13,750. This is challenging.

May 25

Scott and I have breakfast and walk over to the University of Warsaw. At 10:30 a.m., we begin discussing American white collar crimes and how the Poles might define theirs. We argue about human nature, then go to a lunch of blintzes.

The rest of the day is free. We knock around Warsaw with Bozena, visit the monuments to the Warsaw Uprising and to the Ghetto. Tomorrow we go home.

May 26

We check out and get a cab to the airport. Inflation has been so severe that cab fares are quoted somewhere between 400 and 600 times the amount shown on the meter. It just got too expensive to be always changing the meters. The metered price times 400 is a good price; the metered price times 600 is getting high.

We get on a LOT flight from Warsaw to Frankfurt. The plane is Russian-made, and looks different from all the planes we're used to. The flight is fine. In Frankfurt we catch a Delta flight and arrive at Dulles 10 hours later.

Conclusion

I can see how people get addicted to being in foreign places during dramatic change. This trip was a chance for me and the law school to help the Poles get their new country organized. I've become friends with many Polish law professors, and I got a postcard yesterday from one of them mentioning that the statute protecting economic relations has been adopted. I wish them success as they restructure their laws.

Schwemm spends semester in Justice Department

Professor Robert G. Schwemm spent the fall 1991 semester in Washington with the Housing and Civil Enforcement Section of the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice, working with the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 that he studied in his 1990 book, Housing Discrimination: Law and Litigation (Clark Boardman 1990).

Professor Schwemm is widely recognized as the leading national expert on housing discrimination law. The new act expanded the classes protected by the fair housing laws to include families with children and the handicapped, and expanded the remedies and procedural options available to the complaining parties.

"The new law is very complicated procedurally," said Professor Schwemm in describing the 1988 act. "Parties can opt to proceed in federal court rather than by an administrative hearing, so that lawyers in the Housing and Civil Enforcement Section are prosecuting the kinds of small cases that never before have been handled by the Department of Justice. Working with DOJ last fall allowed me to be present at the original development of this new law."

During his semester in Washington, Professor Schwemm had the opportunity to work on a wide variety of matters, from helping junior attorneys with discovery questions to participating in major policy meetings.

"One big issue was financial discrimination. African Americans are being turned down for mortgage loans more often than whites with similar credit histories," Professor Schwemm reports, "but it's not easy to prove that racial discrimination is the reason for this."

Another new development to which Professor Schwemm contributed was the setting up of a nationwide testing program by the Justice Department, in which black and white investigators pose as homeseekers with equal credentials, to see if housing providers discriminate on racial grounds. "Private groups have conducted testing investigations for many years," said Professor Schwemm, "but this is the first time the federal government has done its own testing."

Professor Schwemm left Washington with a high regard for the lawyers in the Civil Rights Division. "I have a new appreciation for the work and detail that go into pretrial planning. I particularly enjoyed the sense of working on common goals as part of a team with such smart, motivated people."

Since his return to Lexington, Professor Schwemm has taught Civil Procedure II and a seminar on Housing Law, while working on the 1992 supplement to his book. He is also a frequent national speaker on the fair housing laws.

Martha Grange retires after 25 years

On June 26, Martha Grange officially retired from the College of Law after 25 years of service. She joined the law school staff in 1967, after working at the University since 1953.

In May Dean Campbell held a reception for Martha, her family and friends at the UK Faculty Club.

At the reception the Dean presented Martha with a travel certificate from her friends at the College of Law and a julep cup, engraved with her initials on the side and on the bottom with the message, "In appreciation of 25 years — College of Law."

In making the presentation, Dean

Campbell said, "Martha Grange has known me first as a student, then as a faculty member, and now as Dean. She has been an important part of the College, and a real friend. I truly cannot imagine this place without her."

Martha looks forward to enjoying her retirement, but after some travel over the summer plans to save time to continue to be included in activities on campus and with friends. "Looking back on my years here," she said recently, "what stands out in my mind are the friends I have made, both among the students and among faculty and staff. I will miss everyone and plan to come back to visit often."

College forms judicial clerkship alumni association

A group of current, future and former judicial law clerks have announced the formation of the University of Kentucky Judicial Clerkship Alumni Association.

The purpose of this organization is to urge UK law students to pursue judicial clerkships and to encourage judges to hire them.

The Association hopes to accomplish these tasks through seminars, written materials and individualized application assistance.

The group is in the process of locating alumni who are former judicial law clerks. If you served as a judicial clerk in any state or federal court, then they would like to hear from you. If you have any suggestions, or would like to become a member, please write to:

Our Newest Faculty

Roberta M. Harding

Professor Harding came to the College of Law in the fall of 1991 and is the first child of a UK law graduate ever to join the faculty. Her father is Robert E. Harding, Jr., '57. She received her undergraduate degree from the University of San Francisco and her law degree from the Harvard Law School. At Harvard she was a finalist in the Ames Moot Court Competition and on the Harvard International Law Journal.

Prior to teaching, Professor Harding was a litigator with Pillsbury, Madison and Sutro and with McCutchen, Doyle, Brown & Enersen, both in San Francisco. Her practice was primarily in the federal courts.

She also spent considerable time on pro bono work in prisoners' rights litigation and death penalty litigation. After working at Pillsbury she moved to Rome, Italy, for two years, where she started her own business teaching American law to Italian lawyers.

Professor Harding is teaching Civil Procedure, Remedies, Litigation Skills and a seminar on Prisoners' Rights, and plans to do research in both the civil procedure and prisoners' rights areas. Her first article will be on "The Consequences of the Inadvertent Production of Privileged Documents."

"I decided to go into law teaching because it allows one to remain involved with the law but from a different perspective," said Professor Harding in a recent interview. "Teaching and training future lawyers provides a lot of interaction with individuals, particularly students, that I found lacking in private practice."

Outside the classroom, Professor Harding serves as faculty advisor for the Student Public Interest Law Foundation and the Association of Black Law Students. She is active in the Lexington Art League and is a prolific painter in acrylics. She has had several shows of her work in Lexington. Professor Harding also likes to read "everything—especially Dostoevsky, Flaubert, Thomas Hardy and Marguerite Duras."

Mary J. Davis

Professor Davis joined the College of Law faculty in the fall of 1991, where she is teaching Torts I and II, Conflict of Laws and Advanced Torts.

She is a graduate of the University of Virginia, where she majored in history, and in 1985 she was graduated magna cum laude from Wake Forest University School of Law. At Wake she was Managing Editor of the Wake Forest Law Review and a member of the trial advocacy board.

After graduation Professor Davis practiced law for three years with McGuire, Woods, Battle & Boothe in Richmond, Virginia and three years with Womble Carlyle Sandridge & Rice in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. She practiced civil defense litigation, primarily in the area of products liability.

"I enjoy working with students, and I always loved being a student myself," said Professor Davis when asked about her decision to teach. "I like the academic life, and the independence to pursue ideas that are meaningful to me." Her research interests include products liability, professional liability and defamation.

In addition to her teaching and research, Professor Davis serves as faculty advisor to the College's Trial Advocacy Board. "This is a relatively new organization," said Professor Davis, "and we are trying to carve a niche for trial advocacy that will one day equal the reputation of the College's appellate advocacy program."

This year, Professor Davis married Stuart Scales of Winston-Salem, who now is working in Lexington. Her outside interests include playing golf, reading historical fiction and biographies, playing the piano and teaching literacy to adults. When asked about her first year of teaching, she replied "I love it. This is the most fun in the law I have ever had."

Douglas Michael

Professor Michael has been a member of the faculty since 1989. He holds an A.B. degree from Stanford University, and M.B.A. and J.D. degrees from the University of California at Berkeley. Upon graduation from law school in 1983 until 1987 he worked with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. He then spent two years with the Washington firm of Arnold & Porter before going into teaching.

Professor Michael worked at the SEC first in the general counsel's office, then as counsel to Commissioner Charles Cox, an economist and professor who was the only non-lawyer member of the Commission. "Working as counsel to Commissioner Cox was a particularly interesting job," said Professor Michael recently. "The variety of the work was fascinating, and I learned much from his perspective as an economist on the often hyper-technical federal securities laws."

After six years' experience, Professor Michael pursued his original goal, teaching. "I always wanted to be a teacher," he said. "Teaching at UK has more than fulfilled my expectations." Professor Michael regularly teaches Business Associations, Legal Accounting, Banking and Bankruptcy and has taught Corporation Finance and Business Planning.

Professor Michael's research interests to date have been in the areas of corporate and securities law. His article on "The Untenable Status of Corporate Governance Listing Standards" was published recently in Business Lawyer, and he is working now on an article on executive compensation.

Since 1990 Professor Michael has served as faculty advisor to the Kentucky Law Journal. This past winter he taught a course at the local office of the Internal Revenue Service to train volunteers who help others with their tax returns.

Professor Michael's wife, Susan Michael, also works at UK as Training Coordinator in the Information Systems department. They have two children, Stuart, age 4, and Amanda, age 1 1/2. Professor Michael spends most of his spare time with his family, but also enjoys swimming, bicycling and playing bridge.

Michael P. Healy

Professor Healy joined the faculty in the fall of 1990 after spending three years as an appellate lawyer with the U.S. Department of Justice, Environment and Natural Resources Division. Prior to working for DOJ he was an associate with Shea & Gardner, a general litigation firm in Washington. Professor Healy is a 1978 graduate of Williams College and a 1984 graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Law School. At Penn he was Articles Editor of the University of Pennsylvania Law Review. Following graduation he clerked for one year for the Honorable Edward R. Becker, U.S. Court of Appeals, Third Circuit.

Professor Healy always planned to go into teaching. "I enjoyed law school," he said recently, "and always had teaching in the back of my mind while practicing law." Professor Healy teaches in the areas of Torts, Environmental Law, and Land Use Planning, and in the future may teach courses in Legislation and Solid & Hazardous Waste Management.

After two years on the faculty, Professor Healy says that "teaching has been everything that I hoped it would be. The students are friendly, are (usually) prepared, and make teaching easy." In addition to his teaching responsibilities, Professor Healy recently became faculty advisor for the Moot Court Board and the National Moot Court Team.

Professor Healy's research has been in the area of hazardous waste disposal and cleanup and the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act (CERCLA). His first article, "Direct Liability for Hazardous Substance Cleanups Under CERCLA: A Comprehensive Approach," was published this year in the Case Western Reserve Law Review.

Professor Healy is married to Carol Garver, who also practiced law in Washington prior to moving to Lexington. They have a daughter, Meredith, born during his first semester of teaching. Professor Healy's interests include bicycling, golf, cooking, gardening, enjoying his family, and reading The New Republic.

Determined to take some time off from teaching (particularly after two years as the Academic Dean), I persuaded Paul Isaacs, then head of the Department of Public Advocacy, to hire me as a public defender for the academic year 1991-92. When I volunteered to go wherever needed, Paul didn't hesitate. "Pikeville," said he with a smile.

Thus on a hot August day I drove my Honda Civic (my friend Allison Connelly calls it, "a good PD car") to that proud little town on the banks of what used to be the Big Sandy river (the cut diverting the Big Sandy around Pikeville is an engineering wonder and a source of local pride), climbed the steps to the local office of the Department of Public Advocacy, and became for a year, "Bill Fortune, Public Defender from Pikeville." I resisted the efforts of David Williams, my colleague and boss in the Pikeville office, to show me off to the local bench and bar as a "UK law professor," and blended into the community as best I could. The clientele in the Pike County jail would not have been impressed by publications and CLE presentations.

In Eastern Kentucky, I found that the criminal justice system bends to accommodate human weakness. It is a charitable system, peopled by prosecutors and judges who are harsh only when necessary, and who count prison sentences as failures rather than victories. In Magoffin district court, where I spent most of my time, the assistant county attorney and I rarely acted as adversaries. Usually we put our heads together (sometimes literally because the room was

CLOSER TO NIGHT COURT THAN TO L.A. LAW

By Professor William H. Fortune

tiny) to come up with a solution which would satisfy the interested parties. Together we would try to persuade the complaining witness (usually but not often a policeman) of the justness of the proposed resolution, then sell it to the defendant, and finally to the judge. Often the prosecutor was explaining the "deal" to my client while I tried to convince his "client" (the policeman) to go along.

I quickly learned that in Eastern Kentucky complaining witnesses, be they victims or police, regard prosecutors as "their" lawyers, and prosecutors will generally comply with their wishes. In my first case (tried by David Williams; I was the second chair) our client shot and seriously wounded a man under the delusion that the victim's wife had given him AIDS; the client was charged with first degree assault. The prosecutor was convinced that our client acted as a result of mental illness, and that the client, who had been evaluated as a schizophrenic at the Kentucky Corrections Psychiatric Center, was not a present danger because he was on medication and had strong family support. The prosecutor agreed with us that the equitable solution was a plea to the reduced charge of assault under extreme emotional disturbance with the defendant to be probated and remain in the community under a doctor's care.

The problem was that the victim, who had almost been killed in the unprovoked attack wanted the defendant sent to prison. After unsuccessfully working with the victim in an attempt to get him to agree to the reduced charge, the prosecutor felt bound to go forward on the first degree assault charge. The case was tried and the defendant found guilty of first degree assault and sentenced to ten years, of which he will have to serve at least five. As of now, however, the defendant is out on an appeal bond and the prosecutor is still trying to persuade the victim that a conviction on the lesser charge would be fair.

In most cases, however, the prosecutor's deference to the wishes of lay victims operates to the defendant's advantage. Why? Because victims generally want one of two things: restitution or a restraining order. If the defendant has stolen or damaged something the victim is usually satisfied if the defendant makes the victim whole. If the defendant has threatened or struck the victim (assaults and terroristic threatening) in most cases the victim is satisfied by a court order telling the defendant not to do it again. These non-punitive remedies (restitution and restraining orders) are the norm in district court, and result in a system where defendants are rarely incarcerated or fined for minor offenses.

Incarceration, at least in district court, is more often pre-trial than post-trial. In Magoffin county arraignments were held once a week, and impecunious defendants unlucky enough to be arrested the day after arraignment were likely to spend six days in jail before a meaningful bond review. At that point, however, the matter could often be resolved by a guilty plea to that magical sentence, "time served."

'In Eastern Kentucky ... the criminal justice system bends to accommodate human weakness.'

Drunks, of course, are a different matter. Those charged with "AI" (alcohol intoxication) routinely pled guilty and were given their choice of five days jail or ten days "community labor." Eastern Kentucky roadsides owe their relative tidiness to the legions of community laborers sent out by the district courts. The offense of AI must occur in a public place (you can get drunk as a skunk inside your house) and many of the cases in Magoffin district court turned on this point, since the police often responded to complaints which took them to private homes with at least one drunken occupant. The state police felt, with some justification, that they ought to be able to arrest the troublemaker for something. AI was usually the charge of choice, because the police couldn't count on the complainants to pursue criminal trespass or assault charges. When I left the troopers were talking about proposing changes to the AI law for the 1994 General Assembly.

To Eastern Kentucky jurors, the presumption of innocence means that the defendant, unless he is known to be a bad person, will be given the benefit of the doubt in close cases. Acquittals are not unknown. In the spring of 1992 I tried five cases to verdict before a small panel (about 25) in Magoffin district court; in addition the jury was called on at least twice that many occasions when, for some reason, the trial was called off (usually because I was offered deal too good to refuse). Thus the jury, the prosecutor, and I spent hours together in the tiny Magoffin district courtroom (smaller than a good-sized living room). We came to know each other on a superficial basis and called to one another by name as we passed on the street.

One of the jurors faced criminal charges in district court and I counseled her on a drug treatment plan. Another was the sister of a client facing serious felony charges. Another asked me to check into a family matter in Lexington. Another was a deputy jailer and courthouse regular. Another was the husband of the prosecutor's secretary. Yet another had dated the prosecutor in high school. By the second trial the prosecutor and I ("Greg" and "Bill" to the jurors) knew who we wanted and who we didn't and settled into an easy informality with the panel. They acquitted some and convicted others, but never imposed a punitive sentence. The jury sentences in the DUI convictions were more lenient than the judge would have imposed on guilty pleas. It was as if the jurors, as well as the prosecutors and the judges, understood sin and human weakness and were willing to forgive. The majority of the panel didn't drink and certainly didn't smoke marijuana, yet they gave the minimum sentence (a fine of $200) to a boy driving under the influence of alcohol and pot. While they didn't approve, they could understand.

I was frustrated, as is every trial lawyer, by the experience of preparing diligently for a trial which didn't go. Cases were continued for various reasons, and often the prosecution offered a deal at the last minute that was too good to pass up. Perhaps the offers were made because prosecutors were impressed with my preparation. If so my clients were well served, though at my loss in terms of trial experience.

MEDIATION CENTER A NEW TOOL IN DISPUTES

Besides their connection with the College of Law, James Keller, Bill Fortune, Pat Moloney, Connie Fraley, Kathy Binder and Sam Greenwell all have one thing in common: they believe that mediation is a viable method of resolving many kinds of disputes, and are actively involved with the Mediation Center of Kentucky. The Center, which opened its doors June 1, is the first of its kind in the Commonwealth. Tom Stipanowich, Alumni Professor of Law and the Center's board chair and acting director, agreed to answer some questions regarding the new program.

Q What is the Mediation Center of Kentucky?

The Mediation Center is a non-profit organization which offers the services of trained mediators to help people settle their disputes outside the courthouse. The mediators are trained not to judge cases, but to act as neutral advisors who work with the parties to resolve disputes in a mutually acceptable manner. The process is private and informal. It usually takes place around a conference table, and you can bring your cup of coffee if you want.

Q Is there proof the process really works?

In the last two days we mediated a longstanding divorce case and a dispute among church members. Both ended in settlement, and the parties were generally delighted. It's a heady experience for the mediator, too.

Based on my own experience, mediation results in settlement most of the time. All of the statistics that I have read on programs around the country support this view. Although there's no guarantee that mediation will be successful, the odds are good that at least some issues will be resolved. And since the parties control the process, they're more likely to be satisfied with the result and to live up to their agreement.

Also, mediation can help relationships. For example, divorced parents may not live together any more, but they usually need to structure some form of working relationship for the sake of their children. Fighting in court often achieves just the opposite, and hurts the children to boot. Mediation, on the other hand, focuses on mutual answers to the needs of the participants and, in this case, the best interests of the children.

Q What kinds of disputes do you handle besides divorce cases?

All kinds of non-criminal disputes, including neighborhood conflicts, small claims, juvenile problems, business-related disputes, employer-employee conflicts, church-related disputes, controversies involving real estate, landlord-tenant matters and personal injury claims. Everything from barking dogs to complex commercial cases.

Q Is mediation always appropriate?

No. Mediation presumes you have parties who are capable of sitting down together and reaching a fair agreement. There are situations where threats of physical violence and other factors make this impossible. Also, there are some cases that must be left in the hands of a public tribunal. Courts will always be needed to vindicate public policies and individual rights, and to mete out punishment in criminal cases.

Q How do people end up in mediation at the Center?

Many of the Center's cases are referred by local courts and social service agencies, although a dispute may be brought directly to the Center without filing suit or seeking assistance from some other organization. As a public interest organization, the Center attempts to make itself easily accessible to everyone.

Q Do attorneys participate in mediation?

Yes, although parties do not need to be represented by counsel. Where attorneys are present, it is critical that they realize that they are not the central players, and they are not in a courtroom or deposition. They must put their egos on hold, and resist the temptation to react every time someone — particularly another attorney — speaks their mind. In many cases, I'm happy to say, attorneys welcome mediation, and help the process along immensely. Their attitude has a lot to do with its success or failure.

Q Who are the mediators?

Our 42 mediators are primarily attorneys, although some are social workers, counselors and other individuals with specialized knowledge or experience. All have received special training as mediators. All of them are volunteers who have dedicated both time and effort to a project that they all regard as a necessary option to dispute resolution. As our attorney mediators will tell you, it is a challenging, energizing, educational, low-risk form of pro bono activity.

So far we have been able to provide training free of charge in weekend sessions at the courthouse and the College of Law.

Our trainers have included outstanding mediators from around the country.

Q What does mediation cost?

Because the Center relies upon trained volunteers, the cost to the public is low. We charge a small administrative fee in most cases; small claims are handled free of charge.

Q What kind of support are you getting from

'Mediation ... focuses on mutual answers to the needs of the participants.'

the bench and the bar?

A lot! We wouldn't be here without the support of the court system. The Fayette County Circuit Court recently initiated a two year mediation pilot program. They passed a rule giving judges specific authority to order cases to mediation, and have provided us with generous financial support through the office of the master commissioner.

The Administrative Office of the Courts has stocked our 1800-square-foot office with desks, tables, chairs, and typewriters. We understand that computers are on the way. Local law firms, businesses and individuals have made in-kind and case donations. We are still depending on volunteers for many things, but we are making great strides.

Q How is the College of Law involved?

My own involvement with the Center stems in part from my belief that law students need to be exposed to alternatives to traditional modes of practice. The response has been terrific. Dozens of law students are helping to run the Center on a day-to-day basis. They take calls, prepare case files, help schedule mediations, computerize records, and sit in on mediations. A few students have trained as mediators. An example is Connie Fraley, a third year law student and experienced

CPA. An active volunteer, Connie serves as the Center's secretary/treasurer and has devoted long hours to setting up Center policies and procedures, not to mention running the books!

Q By the way, where is the Mediation Center?

We are in downtown Lexington on the third floor of the Lexington Building, which is just across Short Street from the courthouse. If you are interested in becoming involved in the work of the Mediation Center, please visit, write or call the Center at 201 West Short Street, Suite 310. The phone number is (606) 255-6056.

Faculty News

Richard C. Ausness, Ashland Oil Professor of Law, recently completed an article entitled, "Products Liability and the Preemption Doctrine." The article will appear in Volume 44 of the South Carolina Law Review. Also this year he wrote a book review for Rivers, and in 1991 he was published in the Newsletter of the ABA Torts & Insurance Practice Section on the topic, "Federal Preemption of State Product Liability Claims."

Drusilla V. Bakert, Associate Dean, resigns in October as Chair of the Southeastern Law Placement Consortium after serving two two-year terms. This year she was appointed Co-Chair of the Bylaws Committee of the National Association for Law Placement (NALP). In February of 1992 she was a panelist for the "Recruitment Practices Forum" at the NALP Southeast Regional Meeting in Atlanta.

Carolyn S. Bratt, W.L. Matthews Professor of Law, is spending the 1992-93 academic year as a Fellow of the American Council of Education. She is one of 30 academics selected nationally to study the administration of institutions of higher education. She is also a member of the Kentucky Supreme Court's Permanent Committee on Gender Fairness in the Courts. This year she has presented three papers: "Turning Rhetoric Into Reality: Efforts to Realize Institutional Commitments to Equity" at the Gender in Academe Conference, University of South Florida, Tampa; "Assessing the Achievement of Equity: The Use of Institutional Rhetoric to Measure Organizational Behavior" at the 5th Annual International Conference on Women in Higher Education, San Diego; and "When Reason Fails: Organizational Obstacles to Gender Equity in Higher Education" at the National Association for Women in Education Conference in San Antonio. She also spoke on "The Civil Rights Act of 1991" for UK/CLE.

Rutheford B Campbell, Jr., Dean, participated as a panel chairman and discussion leader at the Sixth Circuit Judicial Conference, held May 27 - 29, 1992, in Columbus, Ohio. Part of his panel discussion focused on the subject of judicial activism.

Mary J. Davis, Assistant Professor of Law, is working on an article entitled, "Products Liability for Design Defects: Searching for a Defensible Standard." Her article will examine the foundation for strict products liability for design defects, criticizing the current standards as falling short of fulfilling the goals of strict liability and promoting a different standard of conduct for products manufacturers. Professor Davis has been appointed faculty advisor for the UK Trial Advocacy Board.

Todd B. Eberle, Associate Dean and Director of Continuing Legal Education, has been nominated on the official slate as the candidate for President-Elect of the Association of Continuing Legal Education Administrators (ACLEA) for 1992-93. He continues on the Executive Committee of that organization where he has served since 1988. He recently served as general editor for Continuing Legal Education: The Handbook of the CLE Profession, Fourth Edition, (ACLEA, 1992). His article, "Publish or Perish? Established Continuing Legal Education Organizations Setting Up Freestanding Publications Components" appeared in The CLE Journal and Register, ALI-ABA Vol. 38 No. 4 (July 1992). In August 1992 he made a presentation to the ACLEA Annual Meeting in San Francisco on "The Economics of Producing Books."

Eugene R. Gaetke, Wendell Cherry Professor of Law, authored "Money Laundering and Lawyers" with Professor Sarah Welling, which currently is being circulated for publication. The article examines the effect of federal money laundering laws on criminal defense lawyers. He currently is working on "The Fair Housing Act, Government Lawyers, and Legal Ethics," an article examining ethical problems of Justice Department lawyers representing private claimants that is being co-authored by Professor Robert Schwemm.

John H. Garvey, Ashland Oil Professor of Law, is serving the second year of his term as chair of the Association of American Law Schools Constitutional Law Section. During the past year he published two books: Garvey & Aleinikoff, Modern Constitutional Theory (West, 2d ed. 1991); and Garvey & Schauer, The First Amendment: A Reader (West, 1992). He is also an associate editor of Fundamentalism and The State (Chicago, 1992), which will be published in the fall of this year. Professor Garvey has delivered a number of papers recently on these and other themes. They include: "Law and Islam in Saudi Arabia and Iran," Ohio State University (October 1991); "A Reply to Stanley Hauerwas," DePaul University Law School (December 1991); "The Rights of Groups," AALS Annual Meeting (January 1992); "Group Rights in International Law," ASIL Annual Meeting (April 1992); "The Pope's Submarine," University of San Diego (April 1992); and "Religious Authority and Academic Freedom," University of San Diego (April 1992).

Alvin L. Goldman, Dorothy Salmon Professor of Law, is the Chair of the 1993 National Academy of Arbitrators' Program Planning Committee. He also has been re-elected to a three-year term on the Executive Committee of the U.S. Branch of the International Society for Labor Law, and continues as Chair of the Labor Law Group. His article on "The American Law of Strikes and Lock-outs" is being published as part of a symposium in the 1992 issue of The Recent changes in the University of Kentucky Library System are improving access to the law library for many attorneys across the state.

Bulletin of Comparative Labour Law. He is working now on a paper entitled, "The Application of a Model of Bargaining Strength in Analyzing Mediation Systems," to be presented at a conference in Sydney, Australia, and a revision of his treatise on Labor and Employment Law in the U.S.A.

Willburt D. Ham, Professor of Law Emeritus, will be teaching a section of Business Associations at the College of Law for the fall 1992 semester.

Roberta M. Harding, Assistant Professor of Law, has been appointed as a guest lecturer at Georgetown Law Center's International Law Program in Florence, Italy for the summer of 1993. She recently moderated a panel discussion entitled, "Racism in Lexington after Rodney King." This summer she was a guest lecturer at the Governor's Scholars Program at Murray State University.

She is working on an article entitled, "The Consequences of the Inadvertent Production of Privileged Documents." She also is preparing "A Directory of UK College of Law Minority Graduates" and "A Guide to International Summer Internships for UK Law Students," which is being co-authored by Associate Dean Bakert. Last fall she was appointed faculty advisor to the Student Public Interest Law Foundation and the Association of Black Law Students.

Michael P. Healy, Assistant Professor of Law, recently published "Direct Liability for Hazardous Substance Cleanups Under CERCLA: A Comprehensive Approach," 42 Case Western Reserve Law Review 65 (1992). He is working now on "Judicial Review and CERCLA Response Actions: Interpretative Strategies in the Face of Plain Meaning," an article discussing when litigants may bring claims relating to Superfund clean ups. This spring he was appointed faculty advisor to the Moot Court Board and National Moot Court Team.

Thomas P. Lewis, William T. Lafferty Professor of Law, served his second term as an elected member of the College of Law Executive Committee for the 1991-92 school year. He also was appointed to the Constitutional Improvement Policy Council of the Kentucky Center for Public Issues. In April 1992 Professor Lewis was awarded the Lowell T. Hughes Legal Writing Award for his article, "Jural Rights Under Kentucky's Constitution—Realities Grounded in Myth," 80 Kentucky Law Journal (Summer 1992).

Mark A. Linneman, Associate Professor of Law and Director of the Law Library, has been reappointed to the Executive Committee of the Sports and the Law Section of the Association of American Law Schools. He is also a member of the Statistics Committee of the American Association of Law Libraries.

Martin J. McMahon, Laramie L. Leatherman Professor of Law, has been appointed to the American Law Institute Tax Advisory Group and the Board of Editors of the Florida Tax Review. Supplements to three of his books were published this year: Federal Income Taxation of Business Organizations (with P. McDaniel, H. Ault & D. Simmons) (Foundation Press, 1991), 1992 Annual Supplement; Federal Income Taxation of Partnerships and S Corporations (with P. McDaniel, H. Ault & D. Simmons) (Foundation Press, 1991), 1992 Annual Supplement; and Federal Income Taxation of Individuals (with B. Bittker) (Warren, Gorham & Lamont, 1988), 1992 Cumulative Supplements No. 1 and No. 2. His article, "A Capsule View of the History and Importance of the Economic Interest Concept in Mineral Taxation," was published in 27 Tulsa Law Journal 313 (1992). In 1991 he published "A Production Payment Primer," 4 The Natural Resources Tax Review 311 (1991) and "Developments in United States Domestic Taxation of Oil and Gas During 1990," 9 Oil & Gas Law & Taxation Review 90 (1991) (United Kingdom). Professor McMahon has made several presentations over the past year, including: "Recent Cases and Revenue Rulings on Realization and Recognition of Income, Allowable Deductions, Tax Accounting and Procedure," American Bar Association Tax Section Midyear Meeting, San Antonio, Texas (February 1992); and "Economic Interest in Minerals" and "Production Payments," American Mining Congress, Seminar on Mining Taxation, Reno, Nevada (October 1991). His other activities include the ABA Section on Taxation, Teaching Tax Committee (Program Planning Subcommittee), the American College of Tax Counsel Membership Committee and the Internal Revenue Service, Office of Chief Counsel, Petroleum Industry Program Audiotape Continuing Legal Education Project. He presently is working on Cases on Fundamentals of Federal Income Taxation with Rose and Simmons (West Publishing Company) and the second edition of Federal Income Taxation of Individuals (Warren, Gorham & Lamont).

Douglas C. Michael, Assistant Professor of Law, recently published "The Untenable Status of Corporate Governance Listing Standards," 47 Business Lawyer No. 4 (August 1992). He currently is working on an article exploring new corporate legal doctrines to deal with the evolving problem of excessive executive compensation, and is the faculty advisor for the Kentucky Law Journal. Professor Michael recently received a research contract from the Administrative Conference of the United States, an independent federal agency chartered with identifying inefficiency and unfairness in government procedures and recommending reforms to federal agencies and to Congress. He will study and make recommendations to the Conference on the current and potential use of securities industry self-regulation as an alternative to direct regulation.

Dean Campbell, right, congratulates Associate Alumni Professor Donald Winslow on his receipt of the Robert M. and Joanne K. Duncan Outstanding Teaching Award.

John M. Rogers, Brown, Todd & Heyburn Professor of Law and Associate Dean for Academic Affairs, recently published "Some Lessons about the Law from Self-Referential Problems in Mathematics" (with UK Mathematics Professor Robert Molzen), 90 Michigan Law Review 992 (1992). Two book reviews written by Professor Rogers were published in the past year, at 8 Constitutional Commentary 551 (1991) and 86 American Journal of International Law 224 (1992).

Robert G. Schwemm, Wendell H. Ford Professor of Law, served as Special Attorney to the Housing & Civil Enforcement Section of the U.S. Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division, Washington, D.C. from July to December of 1991 (see article, this issue). Also last year, the 1991 Cumulative Supplement to his book, Housing Discrimination Law and Litigation, was published (Clark Boardman 1990). Professor Schwemm was the keynote speaker on "Fair Housing Enforcement: A New Partnership" at the HOPE Fair Housing Center, Chicago, in October 1991. In June of 1992 he served as the moderator of the annual conference of the National Fair Housing Alliance in Washington, and also was the featured speaker at the "Fair Housing Trial Training" conference sponsored by the Boston Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights. The previous month he was the moderator for the topic, "Federal Efforts to Combat Discrimination in the Housing and Mortgage Markets," at the Fannie Mae Conference on Housing Discrimination in Washington. He was also a panelist on "Future Directions for Testing" at the Rockefeller Foundation Conference on Testing for Discrimination in America, held in Washington in September 1991.

David C. Short, Alumni Professor of Law and Director of the Mineral Law Center, has been appointed as Vice Chair for the Coal Committee of the ABA Section of Energy, Natural Resources and Environmental Law after serving as Chairman of the Committee for three years. On July 1, 1992, the Journal of Mineral & Policy became the Journal of Natural Resources and Environmental Law. The first issue will be Volume 8, No. 1 as a continuation of the JMLP. Professor Short will continue to serve as Editor in Chief of the renamed, refereed journal with the new name reflecting more accurately the journal's historic scope of coverage.

Changing faculty

Thomas J. Stipanowich, Alumni Professor of Law, is serving as Acting Director of the Mediation Center of Kentucky until a permanent director is appointed. The Mediation Center, which opened its doors in Lexington on June 1, is an outgrowth of a task force appointed by Kentucky Supreme Court Justice Robert Stephens (see article, this issue). Professor Stipanowich recently published Chapter 23 of Commercial Remedies (Matthew Bender 1992) entitled, "Arbitration as an Alternative to Litigation." Another article, co-authored with Douglas Henderson and entitled "Settling Construction Disputes by Mediation, Mini-Trial and Other Processes—The ABA Forum Survey," appeared in 12 Construction Lawyer No. 2 (April 1992). He currently is preparing a more extensive article on the survey, and will be speaking on the same subject at an international conference on "Construction Conflict: Management and Resolution" in September in Manchester, England. The treatise which he is co-authoring with Professors Ian MacNeil and Richard Speidel, Commercial Arbitration Under the Federal Arbitration Act, is scheduled for publication by Little, Brown in early 1993. Professor Stipanowich recently was appointed as special master in a complex construction litigation by Judge Henry Wilhoit of the Federal District Court for the Eastern District of Kentucky.

Richard H. Underwood, Spears-Gilbert

Professor of Law, has written an article on "Confessions of an Ethics Chairman" that is scheduled for publication by the Journal of the Legal Profession for summer 1992. His manuscript for the Kentucky Ethics Handbook has been delivered to UK/CLE for publication as a joint KBA/UKCLE project. He currently is completing an article on "Part-Time Prosecutors and Conflicts of Interest."

Harold R. Weinberg, Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs Professor of Law, recently published "Adding Commercial Fundamentals, Terms and Transactions to Contract and Commercial Law," 37 Wayne Law Review 1989 (1991), as well as Chapter 39 of 3 Commercial Law and Practice Guide (Matthew Bender 1991) entitled, "Documents of Title and Secured Financing." In November of 1991 he made a presentation to the Bank Counsel Division of the Kentucky Bankers Association on "Highlights from the U.C.C. Articles 3 and 4 Amendments and New Article 4A." He is a member of the Kentucky Uniform Commercial Code Study Commission, as well as the American Bar Association U.C.C. Article 1 Review Task Force, for which he prepared a memorandum concerning good faith issues. In his capacity as an advisor to the Article 9 Study Committee established by the Permanent Editorial Board of the Uniform Commercial Code, he prepared a paper entitled, "Tort Claims and Article Nine." Professor Weinberg also teaches in the area of intellectual property, and is on the ABA Intellectual Property Financing Task Force and the University of Kentucky Intellectual Properties Committee. He is working currently on a law review article tentatively entitled "Federal Preemption of State Commercial Law: Lessons from Copyright Law and the Code" (with W.J. Woodward of Temple University School of Law), and on a chapter on intellectual property financing to be published in Matthew Bender's multi-volume Uniform Commercial Code Service.

Sarah N. Welling, Alumni Professor of Law, is the 1992 Chair of the Criminal Justice Section of the American Association of Law Schools. In May she traveled to Poland to participate in a workshop on "Technical Legal Assistance in White Collar Crime" sponsored by the ABA Central and East European Law Initiative (see article, this issue). In December 1991 her article, "Does the Government Have to Prove Inducement to Convict an Elected Official of Extortion Under the Hobbs Act?", was published at 4 Supreme Court Preview 128. A national expert on the money laundering statutes, Professor Welling made five presentations on this and other topics in 1992: "The United States' Approach to Money Laundering," Criminal Law Society, University of Warsaw, Warsaw, Poland, May 25; "The United States' Approach to White Collar Crime,"

Second Annual Polish Law Days, Posnan, Poland, May 22-23; "Bank Secrecy Act Compliance and Money Laundering Controls," Center for Banking and Financial Institutions, Florida International University, Miami, Florida, April 10; "Money Laundering and Lawyers," with Professor Eugene Gaetke, Randall-Park Colloquium Series, UK College of Law, March 12; and "The Law of Money Laundering," Fayette County Bar Association Continuing Legal Education Seminar, March 6. In addition, over the past year four of her articles have been published in the Money Laundering Alert: "Shipping Drug Proceeds is Laundering," November 1991; "Money Laundering Conspiracy Net Bolstered by Court," January 1992; "U.S. Supreme Court Agrees to Hear Two Important Cases," March 1992; and "Supreme Court Raises Government Burden in Stings," May 1992. Professors Welling and Gaetke have submitted for publication their article on the money laundering laws' impact on criminal defense lawyers entitled "Money Laundering and Lawyers." Professor Welling now is working on an article solicited for a symposium in the Alabama Law Review on "Threshold Amounts and Anti-Structuring Rules" and "White Collar Crime—from Scratch," an article solicited for a symposium in the William and Mary Law Review.

Frederick W. Whiteside, Professor of Law Emeritus, recently published an article on "Legal Services for the Elderly: The Private Bar Responds to the Need," 55 Kentucky Bench & Bar 8-10 (Spring 1991). He is on the Board of Directors of the Kentucky Bar Foundation, and the Board of Directors of Bluegrass Community Services, Inc. Professor Whiteside is practicing law part-time in the areas of wills, trusts and elder law.

Donald A. Winslow, Associate Alumni Professor of Law, received the Robert M. and Joanne K. Duncan Outstanding Teaching Award for 1992. His article, "The New York Stock Exchange and Its Specialist System: The Challenge to America's Predominant Market and Its Market-Making Mechanism" (with D.C. Oesterle and S.C. Anderson) is scheduled to be published in September 1992 at 17 Journal of Corporation Law No. 2 (1992). Two of his articles have been selected for publication by the Kentucky Law Journal: "Defining Suitability," 81 KLJ No. 1 (1992) (With S.C. Anderson) and "An Essay in which 'Shoeless' Joe Jackson and Pete Rose Explain to Ivan Boesky and Dennis Levine the Harm of Insider Trading — A Sporting Response to the Law and Economics Criticism of the Regulation of Insider Trading," 81 KLJ No. 2 (1993) (with S.C. Anderson). His works-in-progress include an essay on "Whatever Happened to Professional Conduct by Law Professors." Professor Winslow was elected by the Class of 1992 to address their graduation ceremony, held on May 9, 1992.

Attention all runners

The Student Bar Association is planning what it hopes will become an annual event—a 5-K road race, appropriately called the RACE JUDICATA. (There will also be a 1-mile fun walk for those less adventurous souls.) The SBA has high hopes for this event and will be working hard to solicit corporate support for the race.

Saturday, October 31st is Homecoming and the day of the big race. SBA is working with the Student Activities Board and the Alumni Association to maximize publicity and increase participation in this official Homecoming event. The race is set to begin at 9:00 a.m. from the parking lot of Commonwealth Stadium. Entertainment is planned, refreshments will be served, and there may even be a guest celebrity or two on hand. PLUS every participant gets a complimentary t-shirt from the premier RACE JUDICATA, which promises to be a collector's item in years to come!

Don't miss the fun and excitement! Plan now to be a part of it. Contact SBA President Doug Kemper at (606) 257-4875 for further details or to request an entry form.

UK College of Law Alumni:

WHEREABOUTS UNKNOWN!!

Finding a former classmate can be just like looking for the proverbial needle in a haystack. But not anymore. Soon an updated directory of our great alumni will be available to help you locate your old friends.

The new UK College of Law Alumni Directory, scheduled for release in late 1993, will be the most up to date and complete reference on over 4,000 UK law school alumni ever compiled! This comprehensive volume will include current name, address and phone number, plus business information (if applicable), bound into a classic, library-quality edition.

The College of Law has contracted the prestigious Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company, Inc. to produce our Directory. Harris will soon be researching and compiling the information to be printed in the Directory by mailing a questionnaire to each alumnus/a. (Should you prefer not to be listed in the Directory, please contact the College of Law's Alumni Office in writing as soon as possible.)

The new UK College of Law Alumni Directory will soon make finding a UK law school alumnus/a as easy as opening a book. Look for more details on this project in future issues.

The College of Law 1992 Awards Night Ceremony was held in the Courtroom on Tuesday evening, April 21. Current students, incoming students, faculty and staff were recognized. Following the ceremony Greenebaum Doll & McDonald sponsored a reception for donors, award recipients and faculty at the UK Faculty Club. The awards presented were:

Greenbaum Doll & McDonald Awards

These tuition scholarships were presented by Laramie L. Leatherman '53 to the following students who ranked first in their respective classes: First-Year Class recipient: James C. Woolery of Ashland; Second-Year Class recipient: Ronald M. Broudy of Lexington.

Kentucky Law Journal Awards

Stoll, Keenon & Park Award for Outstanding Writing for the Kentucky Law Journal: This award was presented by William T. Bishop, III '69 to Thomas E. Bartrum of Louisville for his note, "Birth Control as a Condition of Probation: A New Weapon in the War Against Child Abuse."

Stoll, Keenon & Park Award for Outstanding Service to the Kentucky Law Journal: Buddy Bishop presented this award to second-year student Lloyd C. Chatfield of Lexington, next year's editor-in-chief of the Journal.

Colvin P. Rouse Award: This was given to third-year student Henry L. Hipkens of Lexington for his paper, "The Failed Search for the Perfect Analogy: More Reflections on the Unusual Case of John Moore."

Lowell T. Hughes Award: This is given for the best article published by a student or faculty member in the Kentucky Law Journal. The award was presented this year to Professor Thomas P. Lewis for his article, "Jural Rights Under Kentucky's Constitution: Realities Grounded in Myth."

Mineral Law Journal Awards

David Short '67, Director of the Mineral Law Center, presented the following students, next year's editors of the Journal of Natural Resources and Environmental Law with Massey Foundation Scholarships:

James D. Desmond, Lincolnshire, IL; Douglas A. Henderson, Ann Arbor, MI; Karen W. Imboden, David A. Reisman and Karen L. Whitmer, all of Lexington; and Jennifer G. Marwitz, Richmond, VA.

J. Richard Oexmann Criminal Law Award

This is funded by local attorney J. Richard Oexmann and is awarded each year to the student writing the most outstanding paper in the criminal law area. This year there was a tie for first. Professor Sarah Welling '78 presented the awards to John Y. Brown, III '92 of Louisville and Katherine E. Venti of Huntington, WV.

83rd graduation a time for tradition

On Saturday, May 9, 1992, the College of Law held commencement ceremonies for the Class of 1992, the College's 83rd graduating class. The ceremony took place in the Concert Hall of the Singletary Center for the Arts in Lexington. Graduation festivities began the night before, at a reception for the graduates and their families at Keeneland.

Following tradition, the graduation ceremony included greetings from three speakers.

Robert Wier, the 1992 graduate with the highest overall grade point average, spoke on behalf of the graduating class. Robert is originally from Harlan and a graduate of Cumberland High School. His wife Stephanie, another Harlan County native, worked as a dental hygienist to help support them during Robert's three years in law school. Following graduation Robert started clerking for the Honorable Eugene E. Siler, Jr., formerly of the U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Kentucky, and now on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit. Robert clerked for Stoll, Keenon & Park while in law school.

Thomas B. Russell '70, President of the Kentucky Bar Association for 1991-92, addressed the graduates on behalf of the bar. He noted that the occasion marked his first attendance at a law school graduation, because the Class of 1970's graduation ceremony was cancelled due to unrest on campus that year and the burning of the R.O.T.C. building.

The final speaker, addressing the graduates on behalf of the faculty, was Associate Professor Donald Winslow, chosen by ballot of the graduating class. Professor Winslow urged the graduates to keep in touch with their classmates and the College of Law, during the years to come.

The Faculty Cup is awarded at graduation each year. The recipient, selected by secret ballot of the faculty, is the graduate who made the most significant contribution to the atmosphere of the College as a student.

John Choate Roach of Frankfort received the Faculty Cup for the Class of 1992. John is now clerking for the Honorable Pierce Lively of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Both Robert Wier and John Roach were among the graduates recognized as eligible to be nominated to the Order of the Coif, for placing in the top 10% of the graduating class.

The other graduates who were honored at the ceremony for election to the Coif are:

Phillip B.C. Jones, Chicago, IL (a former UK professor); Lisa Marie Kleopfel, Prospect, KY; Barbara Jean Miller, Running Springs, CA; William L. Montague, Jr., Lexington, KY; Matthew David Nelson, Berea, KY;

Connie M. Payne, Sand Gap, KY; Harold Rader, Manchester, KY; William Keith Ransdell, Harrodsburg, KY; Troy Reynolds, Perryville, KY; Darrell Ruark, Vanceburg, KY; Patrick T. Schmidt, Louisville, KY; and Charles D. Webb, Jr., Huntington, WV.

Nancy Lewis Awards: The following awards are funded by former Dean Thomas P. Lewis in memory of his wife, Nancy. They are given each year to outstanding staff members at the College. Recipients this year are: Janice Cox, Accounts Clerk, College of Law Library; Martha M. Grange, Dean's Office Administrative Assistant and Registrar; Carolyn M. Kennedy, Associate Dean for Admissions and Student Affairs; Jeanie J. Powell, Staff Assistant, Admissions; Susan C. Saunier, Administrative Assistant, Continuing Legal Education; and Joan A. Yocum, Staff Assistant, Career Services.

College of Law enrolls Class of 1995

In August the College of Law enrolled its 1992 entering class. According to Associate Dean Carolyn Kennedy, Chair of the Admissions Committee, the number of applications for admission to the College continues to increase. Despite a national downturn in law school applications generally, for this fall's entering class at UK there were almost 1,400 applications, nearly double the number five years ago, when 770 students applied.

Besides the sheer number of applicants, another interesting aspect of the group of people represented is the range of interests, backgrounds and talents. This year's entering class, the future Class of 1995, includes the following:

- A medical doctor
- A medical student
- A native of Peru
- A Special Olympics volunteer
- The President of a college chapter of Habitat for Humanity
- A husband-wife law student couple
- A brother-sister pair of law students
- A Kentuckian who spent 4 years as a freelance reporter in Taiwan
- A Kentuckian who rowed crew first at Oxford and then at Emory
- Staff Assistant to a U.S. Senate Committee
- The son of a laid off coal miner

- Captain of the UK cheerleaders
- A travel specialist with the Kentucky Tourism Cabinet
- An instructor for the Euro-NATO Joint Jet Pilot Training Program
- A Russian linguist and interrogator for the U.S. Army
- Manager of the Corporate Finance Library for Salomon Brothers in NYC
- The University of South Carolina's Outstanding Senior for 1990
- An Area Extension Agent for the UK College of Agriculture
- Vice President of Northwestern's African-American Student Alliance
- A Kentuckian born in Scotland who did not become a citizen until 1988
- A Gulf War veteran & recipient of the Sea Service Deployment Ribbon
- Special Assistant to Kentucky's Deputy Secretary of Finance
- Chapter founder, Howard University Fellowship of Christian Athletes
- A journalist who has met Jesse Jackson and Archbishop Desmond Tutu
- Lead singer of "Soul Kitchen," a rock and roll band
- Seven bankers
- A case worker for the Home Incarceration Program, Inc.
- A student who researched marine toxicology in Jamaica
- A campus educator on HIV
- A coronary care unit nurse
- An emergency room volunteer at Duke Hospital
- A student Regent at Kentucky State University
- A lab technician leadworker for the Iowa Racing and Gaming Commission
- An analyst for the Budget Committee, U.S. House of Representatives
- A biologist in cardio-vascular diagnostics at the Research Triangle, NC
- The best speaker at the Kentucky United Nations Assembly
- President of a home building and remodeling company
- A software engineer working on a NATO joint development effort
- President of Student Government at Northern Kentucky University
- President of Student Government at Berea
- The Lexington Jaycees "New Jaycee of the Year" for 1990-91
- A staffer for the Governor's Commission for a Drug-Free Kentucky
- An editorial cartoonist published in The Washington Times, The Courier Journal and The National Review
- A teacher of English in Japan
- A photojournalist who freelanced in Asia and Latin America
- A member of UK's Black Voices gospel choir
- The writer, at the age of four, of "The Family that Never Got Arrested"

Group funds public interest internships

The College of Law Student Public Interest Law Foundation ("SPILF") has worked hard this year to raise money to fund public interest summer internships for first- and second-year students. UK students formed SPILF in 1990 to help them pursue public interest careers, even in the face of mounting school loans. Because most public interest groups do not pay salaries to summer clerks, students need some funding support to work in the public interest before graduation.

Under the guidance of Assistant Professor Roberta Harding, the Foundation applied for a grant from the Kentucky IOLTA Fund for 1992-93. In addition, SPILF student members last spring held a fund drive for students to contribute from their own summer earnings. Over $1,000 was collected in student pledges, and a number of faculty members pledged to support SPILF as well.

This fall the SPILF students plan to conduct several fundraising events to add to their student contributions. The monies raised by SPILF will be used first, to fund student fellowships, and secondly, to support the public interest resource center SPILF is setting up at the College of Law. The Center will contain information on public interest work and opportunities in Kentucky, in other parts of the United States and abroad.

Alumni who work for public interest organizations, and who would be interested in hiring a student clerk with SPILF funding, should contact Professor Harding or Associate Dean Drusilla Bakert, UK College of Law, Lexington, KY 40506-0048 (or phone 606-257-8959 to reach Associate Dean Bakert).

UK sweeps regional Moot Court competition

UK's National Moot Court Team swept the Region IV competition in Richmond, Virginia, last November. The winning team consisted of Jennifer Hall of Dayton, Ohio, and Charlie Webb of Huntington, West Virginia. After defeating Duke and losing to a William and Mary team in the preliminary rounds, Jennifer and Charlie successively won the quarter-final, semi-final and final rounds by beating the University of Richmond, Campbell University, and finally the other team from William and Mary.

Charlie received a silver bowl from the American College of Trial Lawyers for giving the best oral argument in the final round. According to faculty advisor Professor John Rogers, "the persuasive arguments of the UK team finally caused the final round panel, always a 'tough' bench in Region IV, to sit back and fix their eyes in silent admiration." The final round panel consisted of Virginia Supreme Court Chief Justice Harry Carrico, North Carolina Supreme Court Justice Harry Martin, and U.S. District Court Judges James Turk, James Spencer and Samuel Wilson.

Because of their win, Charlie and Jennifer were able to compete in the final competition in New York in January. This is the fifth time in the last six years that a UK team has proceeded to the final competition in New York by virtue of being either first or runner-up in the Region IV competition. Region IV encompasses UK as well as the law schools in the states of Virginia, West Virginia, and North Carolina.

UK's other team of Marian Jameson of Bardstown and David Hale of Louisville also performed in an outstanding manner in the preliminary rounds of the regionals, defeating Richmond but losing to the William and Mary team that ultimately became the regional runner-up.

UK students pursue international options

In 1992 several UK law students were successful in finding summer clerkships overseas. Scott Damron, a second-year student from Louisville, last summer established a tie between the UK College of Law and the International Friendship Center in Tokyo, which is funded by private Japanese businesses to bring in students from around the world and expose them to Japan. Scott applied for the program in 1991 and was accepted for the summer after his first year of law school. This year, thanks to the contacts Scott established, second-year student Kenna Walker participated in the program.

Scott himself worked this summer for Japan's third-largest law firm, Masuda & Ejiri, in its Tokyo office. While in Tokyo last summer, Scott used his portable computer to send letters to a large number of Japanese law firms before receiving the offer from Masuda. He spent this summer researching American law for the firm and proofreading contracts and other legal documents translated into English. The firm plans to be the first Japanese law firm to open an office in New York.

Also this summer Carolyn Miller, a second-year student from New York, worked for a law firm in Spain. Carolyn spent part of last summer in Mexico taking an intensive Spanish language class, in hopes of working in Spain this year. Her hopes were realized through Professor Roberta Harding.

Professor Harding and Associate Dean Bakert spent part of their summer putting together an International Clerkship Guide to help other UK law students locate positions overseas. They would be interested in hearing from UK law alumni who have international contacts. If you can help, write to Associate Dean Drusilla Bakert, 261 College of Law Building, University of Kentucky, Lexington, KY 40506-0048.

There's always a stack of books to bring to class.

DEVELOPMENT

When I accepted the offer to join the staff of the UK College of Law last October, I did so for three very important reasons. Being a native of Kentucky (Muhlenberg County), UK has been a household word for my entire life. When I had the opportunity to meet the Dean, the Associate Deans, and the faculty during the interview process, I knew I'd found a group of dedicated professionals who were focused on making the College of Law a premier institution. And when I looked at the level of support from our alumni and friends, I felt confident that people REALLY cared about the law school. After almost a year, I think I made a wise decision.

I am pleased to be a part of the effort and commitment that makes the UK College of Law what it is today. Although I did not attend UK, most of my professional career has been tied to the advancement and support of higher education—first at the University of Cincinnati and most recently at the University of Maryland at College Park. I accepted this position because of the challenge and opportunity to work with you in developing and solidifying the stature, excellence, and worth of this law school.

As you read this report of past and present accomplishments, I hope you will also reflect on the future. As we gratefully acknowledge your financial support and commitment in the following pages, I ask that you consider the part you wish to play in helping us build a distinguished law school better able to serve its students, its alumni, the legal community, and the people of this great state.

Above all, please accept our sincere thanks. Our hope is that you have been greatly enriched by your association with the University of Kentucky College of Law.

The perfect birthday gift

Just what do you give a past governor, civic leader, distinguished corporate citizen, and respected alumnus for his 67th birthday and to mark his retirement from corporate life?

Well, if the person in question happens to be Edward T. Breathitt '50 and his company happens to be The Norfolk Southern Corporation, an endowed professorship at the UK College of Law was the perfect gift.

Last November, a surprise birthday party was held at UK's Spindletop Hall to celebrate Governor Breathitt's 67th birthday. Joining in the celebration were many of Gov.

Breathitt's family, friends, and associates along with Norfolk Southern Chief Executive Officer Arnold McKinnon. Mr. McKinnon announced the establishment of the Edward T. Breathitt Professorship of Law at UK in honor of Gov. Breathitt's 20 years of service to the corporation. Gifts and pledges totaling nearly $150,000 have been received to endow this professorship in Gov. Breathitt's honor.

Also in attendance were then Governor-elect Brereton Jones, and past Governors Bert T. Combs '37, Louis B. Nunn, Julian Carroll '56, and John Y. Brown, Jr. '61.

Since leaving the corporate sector, Gov. Breathitt has joined the firm of Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs in Lexington.

SPECIAL NOTICE

To UK College of Law alumni and other friends who by their gifts and their interest in the College are helping us become an even better institution of higher learning:

This Development Report reflects gifts received before the end of the calendar year 1991.

Gifts received subsequent to December 31, 1991 are considered part of the 1992 campaign and will be reported in next year's Development Report.

There is an unfortunate but necessary lapse of time before the end of each year's campaign and the publication of the appropriate report.

We are also in the process of updating our alumni database and, therefore, you may find errors in the listing of class years, middle initials, and the like. Please, bear with us. Feel free to contact our development office at (606) 257-3208 to correct any listing shown in this year's Development Report. Thank you.

The Ashland Challenge is met

Alumni of the University of Kentucky College of Law contributed more than $350,000 over the past three years to help the College meet a challenge grant given in 1989 by the Ashland Oil Company and the Ashland Oil Foundation.

This past April, Dean Rutheford B Campbell, Jr. and Director of Development Debbye Wells met with Ashland Oil Chairman John Hall and other company officials at a special thank you luncheon to announce the successful completion of the challenge.

As of December 31, 1991, alumni gifts amounted to $357,000, which—when added to Ashland's original $150,000 challenge—gave the school $507,000 for the endowment.

The interest from this endowment is used to fund the Ashland Oil Professorships in Law. These appointments are held by UK law professors Richard Ausness and John Garvey.

If you were among the hundreds of law school alumni and friends who helped make this challenge such a success, please accept our sincere thanks. Once again, you have answered the call and helped your College take a major step forward in providing excellence in legal education.

Morrow bequest breaks records

Like so many others, Carroll Morrow '31 cared deeply for his law school, and at the time of his death he provided a gift that will influence young legal scholars for years to come. Through a bequest in his will, Mr. Morrow left the UK College of Law its single largest gift from an individual—nearly $275,000.

Mr. Morrow was a partner in the law firm of Moore, Morrow & Frymire, now Frymire, Evans, Peyton, Teague & Cartwright in Madisonville, Kentucky.

Upon receipt of the final distribution of Mr. Morrow's estate, Dean Campbell said, "Through his generosity and caring, Carroll Morrow will have a lasting effect on the College of Law for years to come." Mr. Morrow's bequest will be placed into the College's endowment for the support of scholarships and other programs.

Lafferty Society tops 250 members

The membership roster of the UK College of Law's most prestigious donor club —The Lafferty Society —reached an all time high of 252 on December 31, 1991. Members are successful alumni and friends who, through their gifts and pledges of $10,000 or through their planned gifts of insurance or bequests of $50,000, have dedicated their support to the law school.

Members of the Lafferty Society automatically become members of UK's Fellows program.

Received into Lafferty Society membership during calendar year 1991 were:

Carroll W. Morrow '31 *

Henry Meigs, II '49

Reford H. Coleman '63

Joseph T. Burch '66 and Susan Burch

Richard H.C. Clay '77

Mark R. Overstreet '80

Donald H. Combs '82

James W. Gearheart '88

Gail M. Bass

Linda K. Breathitt

Mark A. Linneman

Irving Rosenstein

Rae L. Vansant

The next gathering of the Lafferty Society is scheduled for Friday evening, Nov. 6 prior to the annual UK Fellows dinner and dance.

You make the difference

Alumni and friends of the College of Law truly make the difference when they volunteer their time and expertise to our projects and programs. This spring, Dean Campbell and Development Director Debbye Wells unveiled a new plan for the College's Development Council which will offer more opportunities for law school alumni to become involved with their school.

The new organization of the College of Law Development Council will consist of four separate working committees:

The Lafferty Committee will consist of UK Fellows and Lafferty Society members who will be responsible for making recommendations for changes within the Lafferty Society structure, identifying and soliciting new Lafferty Fellows, and for advice and counsel on major fundraising campaigns for the College.

The Annual Giving Committee will take over the design and implementation of the College's Annual Fund each year with particular emphasis on a renewed Class Agent program, reunion gift programs, etc.

The Lafferty Associates Committee will undertake the task of establishing a new gift society for graduates who have been out of law school for 10 years or less.

The Senior Partners Committee will be responsible for the organization of events and opportunities for the participation of our alumni who graduated 50 years ago or more from the law school.

If you would like to be part of this new plan to increase support and opportunities for UK College of Law alumni, please contact Debbye Wells at (606) 257-3208.

SBA calling alumni

The 1991-92 Student Bar Association has established an endowed scholarship fund (The SBA Most Improved Student Award) that will be given each semester to the second or third year student showing the greatest academic improvement as determined by comparing the student's GPA for the semester in question with his or her GPA going into that semester.

In January, over 80 members of the UK College of Law's Student Bar Association gathered to telephone nearly 1,000 alumni. Under the leadership of SBA President W. Douglas Kemper '93, gifts and pledges were gratefully received from over 300 alumni totaling nearly $40,000. The amount of the Award will be equal to the most recent six months' interest earnings from the endowment. The recipient must be a full-time student and have completed at least three full semesters at the UK College of Law. The first SBA Most Improved Student Award will be presented this year.

From the students at your law school today, please accept a sincere thank you.

In June, members of the Class of 1982 gathered at the Kentucky Horse Park near Lexington for their 10th reunion.

Congratulations, Class of '82

Special congratulations go out to the Class of 1982 for one of the most successful and unique 10-year reunions in law school history.

On June 6, nearly 100 class members along with their families gathered at the Kentucky Horse Park for outdoor games, a pig roast, and an evening of dancing. The class presented Dean Rutheford Campbell with a check to increase the endowment of the Lynn Bennett Scholarship Fund, established by the Class in memory of one of their classmates.

Colvin P. Rouse Sr. endowment scholarship

The College of Law has been the recipient of gifts totaling more than $100,000 from 1928 law school alumnus, Colvin P. Rouse, Sr. for a scholarship endowment established to provide tuition assistance for an outstanding student at the UK College of Law.

Mr. Rouse is a 1926 graduate of UK's College of Business and Economics, received his JD from UK in 1928, and went on to receive his LL.M. from Columbia University in 1932. While at UK, he was Editor in Chief of the 1927-28 Kentucky Law Journal. Mr. Rouse's career includes service as City Attorney of Versailles, Kentucky from 1935-1942, and as Master Commissioner of the Woodford Circuit Court from 1935-1968. He is senior partner in the firm of Rouse, Rouse & Combs in Versailles.

At a special appreciation luncheon in May, Dean Rutheford Campbell and Lexington Campus Chancellor Robert Hemenway met with Mr. Rouse and 10 members of his family including his wife, Rebecca Rouse, his two daughters, Mrs. Donald P. Gaver, Jr. and Mrs. Stephen Wotman, and his two sons, Colvin P. Rouse, Jr. and James D. Rouse. Both Dean Campbell and Chancellor Hemenway spoke of the importance of private support to the scholarship programs at UK's law school.

By providing this endowment, Mr. Rouse has guaranteed that a deserving student will be able to study law at UK for generations to come. His commitment to the UK College of Law is yet another example of the importance of support from our alumni and friends.

How can you help?

An architect's rendering of the University of Kentucky College of Law.

Involvement and support for the College of Law takes many forms—each equally important. Whether you choose to show your support of your law school through involvement in the development council or alumni board, as an advocate to the state's legislative body, as a resource for new students, as an adjunct faculty member, or as a donor, you make the difference.

We are often asked by alumni "How Can I Help?" Donate! Donate your time, donate your influence, and, of course, donate your resources. Following you will find a short list of examples of support gratefully accepted by the UK College of Law. Further information on any of these vehicles can be received by contacting Deborah Wells, Director of Development, 227 Law Building, Lexington, KY 40506-0048, Phone (606) 257-3208, Fax (606) 258-1061.

1. Gifts of Cash. The majority of gifts to the law school are in the form of cash. A cash gift may be claimed as a charitable deduction up to 50 percent of adjusted gross income for those who itemize.

2. Gifts of Securities. Gifts of appreciated securities can provide special tax advantages: capital gains tax may be avoided completely and the fair market value of the stock may be claimed as a charitable deduction on your income tax, up to 30 percent of adjusted gross income for those who itemize, with a five-year carryover.

The simplest way to make a gift of stock to the law school is to instruct your broker or banker to transfer it to the University of Kentucky. The broker should be asked to contact the University's development office to determine whether the University wishes to keep the stock or sell it.

3. Gifts of Real Estate. Gifts of homes, farms and other real property can receive the same treatment as gifts of securities: no capital gains tax plus deductibility at fair market value. Usually, the University will accept gifts of real estate if there are no restrictions placed on selling the property.

4. Gifts of Life Insurance. When UK is named as the owner and sole beneficiary of a life insurance policy, the donor receives an immediate income tax charitable deduction of the lesser of the policy's fair market value or the net premiums paid. Premiums later paid by the donor are also tax deductible.

5. Matching Gifts. Many alumni are able to increase their gifts to the law school through their or their spouse's employer's matching gift program. If your employer has such a program, your gift may be multiplied once, twice, or even three times. Usually, the corporation's personnel department can provide information about a matching gift program and forms to send with donations.

6. Wills. The most frequent form of an estate gift to the law school is a specific bequest in a will. Important tax savings can result from this type of contribution, since bequests to UK qualify for an estate tax deduction. On the next page of this magazine you will find suggested bequest language and a form that can be returned for more information.

7. Gifts in Trust. Benefactors who wish to receive income during their lives while at the same time providing a significant gift to the law school should consider establishment of a charitable remainder annuity trust or a charitable remainder unitrust.

8. Gifts in Kind. Another way to support the College of Law is through gifts of tangible personal property. When the gift relates to the mission of the College, such as books, works of art, or equipment, the donor is eligible for a charitable deduction equal to the full fair market value of the gift.

When you remember the people and institutions
with special meaning in your life, consider passing that richness on to the next generation.
